Numb. 404.

THE Pennſylvania GAZETTE.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

From September 2. to September 9. 1736.

LONDON, June 1.

NEXT Week his Majeſty's Ship the Burlington will be launch'd at Deptford, and the Command given to the Right Hon. the Lord Charles Fitz-Roy, Son to his Grace the Duke of Graſton, who has ſerv'd a conſiderable time in the Royal Navy.

June 2. They write from Vienna, that the Union between the Imperial and French Courts, grows every Day more compleat; at preſent there is ſo perfect a Friendſhip between them, that one and the ſame Soul ſeems to animate both Parties. The projected Marriage between Don Carlos, and the ſecond Archdutcheſs appears to be entirely laid aſide, but it is ſaid a magnificent Embaſſey is preparing for Paris, another for Madrid, and a third for Petersburg. In the mean time, M. Robinſon, the Britiſh Miniſter, has quitted his Deſign of repairing to London, his Preſence there being more neceſſary, to conſult with the Miniſters of the reſt of the Proteſtant Powers, the Intereſt of the common Cauſe in this Conjuncture.

According to our Advices from Conſtantinople, every thing ſeems in great Confuſion, the Grand Viſier having propoſed in the Divan to commit the Ruſſian Miniſter to Priſon, as abſolutely neceſſary for the Safety of the State, the ſame was vehemently oppos'd by the Muſti; whereupon it was carried by a Majority of Votes that he ſhould have leave to retire. On the other hand the Government take all poſſible Care to prevent an Inſurrection among the People, to which they ſeem generally inclined; and as a Piece of wholeſome Severity, 19 Heads were expoſed early in the Morning from the Walls of the Seraglio, to ſtrike a Terror into the Multitude.

It is confirmed, that the late depoſed Grand Viſier is made Baſhaw of Boſnia, and Commander in chief of the Ottoman Army againſt the Ruſſians.

By our Letters from Rome, there ſeems to be a Plot hatching againſt the Head of the Church, which perhaps gives him more Uneaſineſs than the Pretenſions of the Spaniards. It is publickly reported that ſeveral Cardinals have preſented a long Memorial to the Pope, complaining of the Conduct of ſome of his Confidents, and Copies of the ſaid Memorial are handed about the City, which is ſaid to be ſign'd by no leſs than twenty-three Cardinals. In particular, Cardinal Firau, Secretary of State, is charged with acting againſt the Intereſt of the Roman State in the late Miſunderſtanding with the Court of Spain.

On the 19th Inſtant, a Fire broke out at Riga, which conſumed a hundred and Fifty Houſes.

The Czarina has generouſly relinquiſh'd to the Dantzickers her Claim of two Millions of Ducats for their favouring King Staniſlaus's Eſcape, to the inexpreſſible Joy of that City.

The Duke of St. Aignan, the French Ambaſſador at Rome, having offered the Pope his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Mediation, to mitigate the High Demands of the Catholick King; it is aſſured, his Holineſs anſwered, that he readily accepted the ſaid Mediation, provided it was very ſpeedy, but he much feared, before it could have any effect, his poor Subjects would be utterly ruined.

They write from Naples, that more Troops Ammunition and Artillery are continually ſhipping off, and tho' the Cry is for Rome, it is generally ſuppoſed the Mask is now ready to be thrown off, and they will openly make their Attempt upon Corſica.

Letters by the Mail inform us, that the Pope's Nuncio had actually retired from Naples by order of Don Carlos; and that DonCarlos would not hearken to any thing which was offer'd by the Archbiſhop of Naples, in favour of the Father of the Church.

June 7. Letters from Conſtantinople of the 3d of May, make mention of a freſh Report being current there, that Peace was at length really concluded with the Perſians, and that the Porte expected every moment an Expreſs from Achmet Baſha, the Commander of the Ottoman Army, with the original Treaty ſigned by both both Parties: But as Reports of this kind have been given out before, and proved falſe, little Credit is given to this, which is rather looked upon to be an Artifice of the Miniſtry, to ſtill the Clamours of the People, and prevent a general Inſurrection. There is in the Harbour a numerous Fleet, ready to ſail for the Coaſts of Crimea; and the Captain Baſha had orders ſome time ago to depart, but delayed his Departure upon the Aſſurances the Ruſſian Reſident gave the Court, that the Czarina, his Miſtreſs, would ſuffer no Acts of Hoſtility to be committed, till the Negociations then on foot with certain Chriſtian Powers, who, as Mediators, were endeavouring to adjuſt in an amicable manner the Differences between the two Empires, ſhould be determined; but as it now appears thoſe Hopes are without Foundation, the Ottoman Fleet will immediately ſet ſail.

An Expreſs from the Camp before Aſoph is arrived at Petersburg, with an Account, that the Beſieged having made a vigorous Salley, had retaken ſome ſmall Forts, and driven out the Coſſacks, who were in Poſſeſſion, after killing a conſiderable Number of them; but the regular Troops advancing, the Turks were ſoon repulſed, and forced to abandon the Forts a ſecond time. Proviſions are plentiful enough in the Camp, but they are in great want of Feuel; and as the River Don is entirely clear of Ice, it was not doubted but the heavy Artillery was already arrived, after which the Town could not hold out above three Weeks at moſt. Count Munich is advancing with a large Detachment, to execute his projected Attempt upon Crimea, the Succeſs of which is expected at the Ruſſian Court with great Impatience.

We learn by Letters from Baſtia, that the Malecontents, who were advanced within Cannon-ſhot of the Town, had retired, without daring to undertake any thing farther; that Lord Theodore, who according to the conſtant Practice of Uſurpers, ſeemed to take Pleaſure in the ſhedding human Blood, exerciſed his new Sway in ſo cruel and tyrannical a manner, that his own Party began to grow weary of him; that the Sieurs Caſacolli, Ornani, Salideo, Lucciano and Orezzo, of the beſt Families in the Iſland, had been ſhot to Death by him, for not paying an implicit Obedience to his Orders. On the other hand, that the Republick of Genoa began to rouſe out of their Lethargy, that they were ſending Supplies of Artillery, Ammunition, and Proviſions, into all the Places which are yet in their Poſſeſſion; that new Levies were carrying on with the utmoſt vigour, and that they were employing all their Induſtry at Foreign Courts, to obtain a ſufficient Body of Troops to bring the Rebels to Reaſon.

Our Advices from Vienna make a War with the Turks unavoidable. On the 25th Inſtant, N. S. the Emperor had a Conference with his Miniſters, in which it was reſolved to act in Concert with the Court of Ruſſia upon the Frontiers of Turkey, and to ſend an Order to M. Tahlman, his Imperial Majeſty's Miniſter at Conſtantinople, to come away immediately; the Troops which are filing off towards Hungary, continue their March with ſo much Diligence, that they reſt only every 4th day. In the mean time, the Baſha of Widdin has Orders to repair the Fortifications of that Place with the utmoſt Diſpatch; and Letters from all Parts confirm the extraordinary Preparations of the Turks throughout their European Province, where all their Troops are in Motion.

From Leghorn they write, that they look with Contempt upon the whole Affair of Corſica, as neither encouraged by Don Carlos nor his Catholick Majeſty; but as a deſperate Undertaking, which muſt inevitably end in the Ruin and Death of the Undertaker.

There is Advice from Dreſden, that the Count de Hoyms, firſt Miniſter to the late K. of Poland, having been Priſoner about a Year in the Caſtle of Konigſtein, for State-Affairs (particularly for holding a Correſpondence with France) and having no Hopes of Liberty, gave way ſo much to Deſpair, that on the 10th paſt he hanged himſelf in his Chamber with a Handkerchief, which he had tied to a great Hook. A Letter of his own Hand-writing was left on the Table, directed to the two Servants by whom he was attended; as follows.

'Be prudent; make no Noiſe; nor give the 'leaſt Alarm. Take me down immediately; 'put me in a Bed; then ſhut the Door, and 'puſh the Bolt on the Outſide with this Packthread. By this means no body will know 'that you have been in the Room. It will be 'taken for granted, that I died of a Fit of an 'Apoplexy. If you do this Buſineſs well, 'and keep your own Counſel, the Family will 'reward you with 1000 Ducats, on your produ'cing this Paper.

After they had taken him down, they found in his Pockets a Razor, a Penknife and Sciſſars, and in his Apartment they found a good Quantity of Cord and Packthread, with a Hammer and Pincers.

London, June 26. The March of Count Munich to the Crimea, and the Victory he gained over the Cham of Tartary at the Head of 100,000 Men, comes confirm'd from all Hands. That General on the 8th of May arrived within 15 Miles of the Enemy, who immediately attack'd his Van with a Party of their Troops, but ſending out ſome large Detachments to drive them away, the Ruſſians advanced too far, and were ſurrounded by 30,000 Tartars, who were however ſoon defeated by the coming up of a Reinforcement of Muſcovite Horſe with ſome Artillery. The Tartars decamp'd next Day, and the Ruſſians following at their Heels, encamp'd for ſome Nights together in the very Spot the Enemy quitted the preceding Morning. During this time a Courier from Conſtantinople to the Cham fell in with the Ruſſians, and was taken with Letters upon him, written with the Grand Vizir's own Hand.

Count Munich having diſpoſed his Army into a a Square, in that Form proceeded on his Marches, in order to be at all times prepared againſt any Attack. On the 15th he had no ſooner left his Camp, than he found himſelf environ'd by the Tartars; but the Artillery, without the Aſſiſtance of a ſingle Musket, repuls'd the Enemy with great Loſs, and they retir'd precipitately within their Lines. The Ruſſians encamp'd that Night in Sight of Precop.

On the 18th the Tartars made a vigorous Sally from their Lines, but were again repuls'd. The two next Days Count Munich bombarded Precop and making a Feint to attack the Enemy's beſt Wing, they immediately remov'd all their Forces and Cannon to that Side, which favouring the Ruſſians Deſign, they began their March as ſoon as the Sun was down, and under Cover of the Night, came up with the right Wing without the leaſt Suſpicion: The Cham was at his Morning Prayers when the Ruſſians forced the Lines which were extremely ſtrong, having a Foſſe before them of 140 Feet broad; the Trenches were Seven Miles in length, 60 Feet high, and flank'd with Stone Towers, Gun-ſhot from each other, guarded by Janiſſaries. Count Munich's Army conſiſted of no more than 80 Battalions of Foot, 55 Squadrons of Horſe with 30,000 Coſſacks and Calmucks: The Attack needed the utmoſt Bravery, and the Ruſſians ſhew'd a Courage not be reſiſted. Their Ladders being too ſhort to ſcale the Precipice, they clapp'd Chevaux de Frize upon one another, and clamber'd up, ſpite of the ſhower of Darts and Arrows which the Tartars pour'd on them. The Ruſſian Artillery mean while gall'd the Enemy very ſeverely, and as ſoon as theſe found the Muſcovites got within their Lines, they retir'd with inexpreſſible Confuſion. The Cham, who with the utmoſt Difficulty ſav'd himſelf, left his Tent and Riches a Booty to the Ruſſians, who maugre all the General could do, abandon'd themſelves to Plunder, advancing even to the Suburbs of Precop.

By the Advantage of this great Victory all the Crimea is open to the Ruſſians; and Precop, which is the Key, muſt fall in a few Days, being defended only by 1000 Janiſſaries, and having nothing but a Rampart of Earth.

'Tis remarkable, that in this Action the Ruſſians loſt but a Lieutenant, and about 200 private Men; and they have taken ſome thouſands Priſoners.

The Czarina's Army before Aſoph is far advanc'd in the Reduction of that Place, but its Surrender is not confirmed. The Garriſon is furniſhed with a twelvemonth's Proviſion: They have made ſeveral Sallies, but always with Loſs; and as Count Laſcey carries on his Approaches regularly, whilſt the Ruſſian Squadron there cuts off all Hope of Relief, the Place is looked on as good as taken. General Luſcey had a very extraordinary Eſcape in his Way to the Camp: 'Twas Midnight, and he aſleep in his Coach, when 700 Tartars ſurrounded him; but having the Dexterity to jump out, and in an Inſtant mounting one of his Couch Horſes, he found means to get clear of the Enemy: His Equipage and Papers were ſeiz'd, ſome of which were of the utmoſt Conſequence, but the Tartars not underſtanding them, threw them away, and they were picked up the next Day without Loſs of a ſingle Sheet.

The Grand Signor in his Diſtreſs has ſent to the Emperor, to conjure him not to take Advantage of his Misfortunes, or otherwiſe to interfere in his Quarrel with Ruſſia, than by his Mediation and good Offices, which he will moſt readily accept.

On the other Hand, the Czarina demands of his Imperial Majeſty to make a Diverſion in Hungary. 'Tis certain the German Troops are repairing thither from all Parts.
